

Another Fake Birth Clinic Bombing

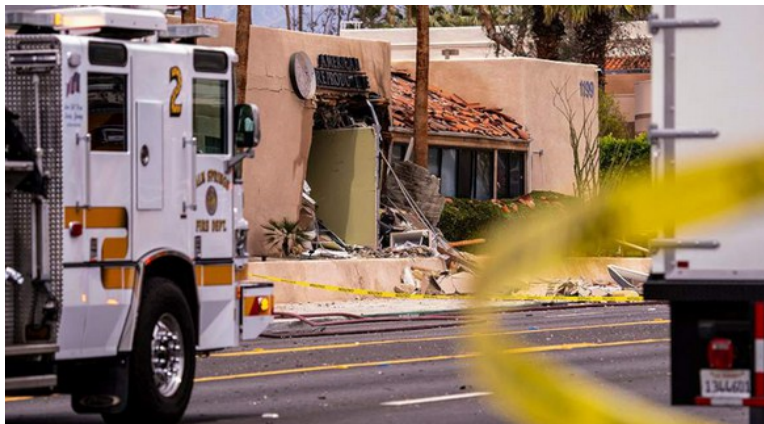

by Miles Mathis

May 18, 2025

This will be very brief since it is obvious from the first sentence this was faked. We are told Guy Bartkus bombed a fertility clinic, killing himself in the process. He just happens to be from Twenty-Nine Palms, near Palm Springs. You may want to look that town up, since 29 Palms Marine Base is one of the largest military bases in the world, covering 1,100 square miles and housing almost 8,500 soldiers. Do you really think that is just a coincidence? I have told you before these jokers in military intelligence love to run their projects near base, since it saves on gas, I guess. They are almost always just across the fence from some military base like this, so they just walk over.

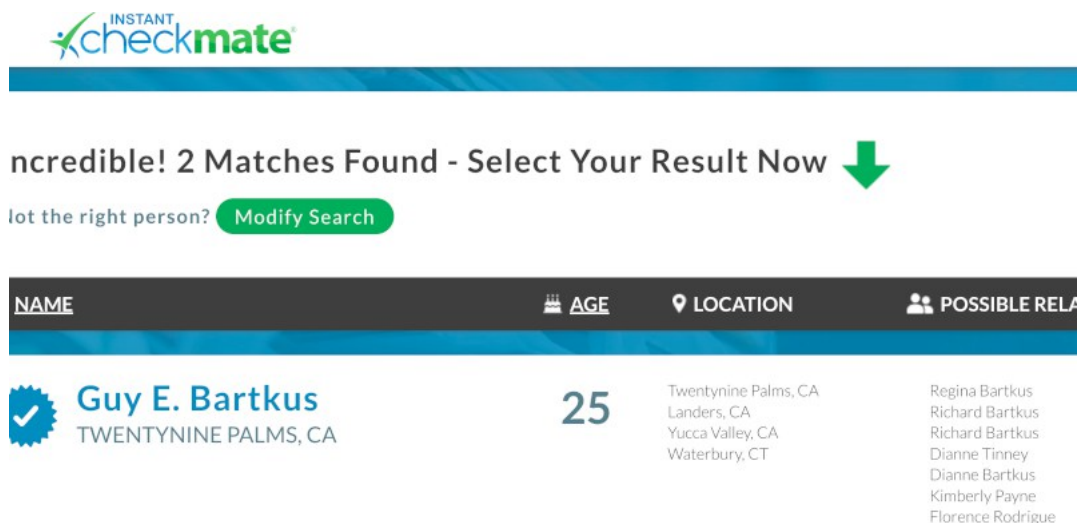

The clinic was closed, but nonetheless they are claiming five other injuries. That makes no sense. Just people driving by, or what? Study that photo: if the place was closed, how could anyone be injured by that? Obviously, this building was derelict and vacant and the Marines just slapped a fake sign on it and then blew it up. Bartkus is one of their own and he isn't dead. Maybe he was going into covert ops and needed to go undercover, so they faked his death.

Are these the troops you are supporting?

What's wrong there? Amazing, isn't it, that the bomb was planted at the front door, blowing out thirty feet across four lanes, but didn't damage the sign above the door. What luck for the arriving camera crews, eh, so that you could know this was American Reproductive instead of an old Radio Shack.

We have more proof this was staged, since this event is linked to another fake from last month in Fox Island, WA, where a Sophie Tinney was allegedly killed on request by her boyfriend while she slept. Bartkus mentions her in his manifesto as “a friend”. But she wasn't a friend, she was a relative, since according to Instantcheckmate Bartkus is related to a Dianne Tinney, aka Bartkus, 63. She would seem to be his mother, which would make Sophie, 27, his sister or half-sister. She has only one location on her list, Gig Harbor, which takes us to the same place since almost that entire island west of Seattle is military.

The screenshot shows the Instantcheckmate search results for Guy E. Bartkus. The header includes the Instantcheckmate logo and a blue bar. Below the bar, it says "Incredible! 2 Matches Found - Select Your Result Now" with a green arrow pointing down. A link "Not the right person? Modify Search" is visible. The results are displayed in a table with columns: NAME, AGE, LOCATION, and POSSIBLE RELATIONS. The first result is for Guy E. Bartkus, 25, located in Twentynine Palms, CA. The possible relations listed are Regina Bartkus, Richard Bartkus, Richard Bartkus, Dianne Tinney, Dianne Bartkus, Kimberly Payne, and Florence Rodrigue.

NAME	AGE	LOCATION	POSSIBLE RELATIONS
 Guy E. Bartkus TWENTYNINE PALMS, CA	25	Twentynine Palms, CA Landers, CA Yucca Valley, CA Waterbury, CT	Regina Bartkus Richard Bartkus Richard Bartkus Dianne Tinney Dianne Bartkus Kimberly Payne Florence Rodrigue

We also link to a Shelley Scheig-Tinney, 81, possibly a mother or aunt of Dianne, who links us to Judith Scheig and Joyce Cowan. Are you getting the usual picture yet? These people are Jewish. Cowan=Cohen. So this is just the old Operation Chaos again, the favorite pastime of the Phoenician Navy. They have nothing better to do. They link us to Richard Scheig also of Gig Harbor, CEO of Envisage, which according to LinkedIn appears to be some sort of head hunter.

Sophie was allegedly killed by Lars E. Nelson, 29, and we find a person matching his stats at LinkedIn, including his location of Tacoma and his age, so maybe I got there before they scrubbed him. He comes out of Americorp, which is of course one more CIA front. It was just shut down by DOGE, so we see that possible link here. He has also worked for University Behind Bars, which gives him that link to law enforcement. So another huge red flag here.

And in related news, I went to the market today, so was in the car at the right time to hear another CIA front, NPR, pushing a slew of old fake stories, including Oklahoma, Ruby Ridge, and the Patriot movement. Some Southern Poverty Law Center talking head (also an agent) was selling that garbage again, trying to convince you that dangerous right-wing extremists are using short-wave radio to recruit people into their neo-Nazi organizations. Standard make-work propaganda from FBI/CIA/Homeland Security, to justify their exorbitant budgets. This is just a continuation and acceleration of a project J. Edgar Hoover started back in the 1920s to sell a huge expansion of Intelligence to the public. Working with Hollywood he created a long string of fake mobsters, which Congress then funded him to pretend to fight. Even with a thousand-fold increase in budget, that was too limited, especially when CIA arrived and wanted a piece of that pie. The public would buy only so many mobsters. So they had to invent terrorists, serial killers, mass murderers, patriot fronts, Satanists, and now child and human trafficking. DHS pushed in, so they had to expand even more after 911. Since then, they want you too terrified to leave the house. They want you clinically insane but technically functioning, meaning you are totally divorced from reality, but you can still do a desk job or food court job, as long as there is a TV or computer screen there to prompt you, prep you, and primp you constantly. They keep the warning light at a constant orange now, instead of red: they need to keep you startled and anxious enough to continue to stock the fallout shelter with toilet paper, bottled water, and the Infowars pharmacy, but not startled enough to actually go down into it and lock the door. They need you to continue buying overpriced food and paying your criminal rents.

These projects are also aimed at me, of course, because they want you to think I am also a right-wing extremist and budding terrorist. They would love it if you lumped anyone who criticized the government or mainstream in any way with right-wing terrorists. Back in the 1960s the Hippies were the target of this project, as we know. They were the dirty longhairs, the malcontents, the anti-government ne'erdo wells. Targeted for the crime of giving speeches on campuses asking for fair treatment of Natives, of animals, of the Earth, of workers. For the crime of wanting to end the wars, rein in the CIA, rein in the police, downsize the military. But by 1970 the government had crushed the Hippies with a full-spectrum war of fake events, led by the fake Manson event. So they were free to rebuild their opposition to suit themselves, and they much preferred a propped-up enemy from the right. Why? Because having to fight the left in the form of these freedom-loving, sunshine-loving, and war-hating Hippies just reminded people that the government itself was far far far right. That war against the Hippies had been won, but at a very high cost: the government looked very bad winning it, and pretty much everyone across the board admitted that. That's why the 70s remained so volatile, and why trust in government, media, and all institutions has been spiraling downwards ever since.

It is also why government had to flip the definitions. They have completely redefined the left since 1970, making you now think it has something to do with DEI, trannies, abortion, Socialism, man-hating, white-hating, cancel culture, censorship, and so on. A 1960s Hippie transported into the current decade wouldn't recognize his own language. His words, ideas, and platforms have been turned inside-out and upside-down on purpose. The new "leftists" are even bigger fascists than the new rightists, which took some doing since the new rightists are still first-rate fascists. Yes, Trump is marginally better on a few manufactured tangential issues like men in women's sports, DEI, food coloring, sex-change surgeries, and things like that, but on the largest issues both parties agree: we will continue to have a trillion-dollar military budget that delivers nothing but poverty and lies; a half-trillion Intel budget, ditto; police on every corner and cameras on every tree; a medical establishment run amok; regulatory agencies owned by those who they are supposed to be regulating, and corporations fatally polluting the entire world; and a country run by a shadow elite composed of evil trillionaires.

Given that short list of massive tragedies, it is amazing NPR can get you to listen to the manufactured sins of a few drawling nincompoops on shortwave. That is to say, even if those ignorant racist dudes in rural Montana on the radio were real and not planted agents (they aren't), their crimes and potential crimes would be nothing compared to the known crimes of the government and corporate elite. We just went through a Pharma genocide where millions of people were wiped out by vaccines known to be dangerous, while shielded and promoted by federal, state, and local officials, all of them complicit in mass premeditated murder and mayhem. No Patriot fronts were involved in that. No fake neo-Nazis were involved in that. No radicalized Muslims, Christians, or Palestinians were involved in that. That was done by your neighbors and relatives and co-workers. That was abetted by your Hollywood and sports and music heroes. Someone very close to you personally was involved in that, and you now know that, because it wasn't just some unverifiable story on NPR or MSNBC or CNN, it happened in your hometown to you and yours. You may be permanently damaged, and if you aren't someone in your immediate family almost surely is. So turn off NPR and any other outlets on either side trying to divert you with these old fake events and focus on the present. If you don't, you are about to be poisoned again.
