

Two More Fakes from England

by Miles Mathis

May 28, 2025

Making headlines in the US is a lady Lucy Connolly, allegedly sentenced to 2.5 years in prison by a British court for a short tweet she had up for only four hours and then took down without request.

A bit over the top, sure, but she was responding to the famous Southport attacks of last summer, where a 17-year-old black Rwandan named Axel Rudakubana (Buckwheat, above) allegedly murdered three little white girls at a Taylor Swift-themed dance studio in Merseyside.

How we know both events were fake:

- 1) Axel pled guilty.

- 2) Even worse, Lucie pled guilty to inciting racial hatred. That would never happen in a million years. That tweet would be free speech in the US, since it fails to meet the requirements for incitement, which are very specific. She says she wouldn't care if this happened, and would even be glad, but that isn't incitement. It is just an opinion. There is no evidence she is about to burn down anything, and she is not creating groups or making plans to make it happen. Nor is she inciting any specific event. She is clearly just venting anger that probably 90% of whites are feeling in that area.
- 3) There have already been riots nationwide for many months, though we may assume they were staged, and Lucy/Lucie had nothing to do with them. So going after this one lady for a 4-hour tweet is absurd.
- 4) They can't decide if her name is Lucy or Lucie.
- 5) She is the wife of prominent councillor Raymond Connolly, so she is not just some random person.
- 6) Al Qaeda quickly comes up on any search for this. Axel was carrying an Al Qaeda manual. A huge red flag, as you should know from 911, since it is another CIA-front pretend organization, like Hamas, Hezbollah, Antifa, and all the rest.
- 7) Axel was allegedly found guilty and sentenced to life, but as we saw with Anders Breivik in Norway, it later came out the sentence was very strange. Axel is actually being "detained at His Majesty's pleasure", which is a fancy way of saying this is all a fraud. It means Axel was not officially sentenced to life in prison or anything else. It would be more accurate to say he is being fake-detained by MI5.
- 8) They had to get that "Taylor Swift-themed" thing in there, which should really piss you off. Even while selling you these fake race wars, they have to insert Taylor Swift promotion.
- 9) Axel was arrested at the scene. Considering how slowly police move these days, that is pretty hard to believe. So we are supposed to believe this kid with two good legs just hung around the dance studio for thirty minutes until police arrived, waiting to get arrested?
- 10) We are never told why he would want to stab a bunch of little girls. Does the Al Qaeda manual recommend that?
- 11) The dance class had just started that week. It was first advertised three weeks before the event, almost as if it was created for it.
- 12) Axel's knife was 8 inches long. Of course it was. They love that number. It was that or 11 inches long.
- 13) We are told the front door was unlocked for fire safety reasons, which shows they think you are a moron, and which proves they are lying about this event. You should know how those doors work: they can easily be set to lock from the outside, but open from the inside. Fire safety has absolutely nothing to do with it.
- 14) The teacher Leanne Lucas was allegedly stabbed in the back and head five times with an 8-inch knife, but rather than dying she walked out on the landing and called 999 (911). That's nice. She is fine now of course. Couldn't be better. Will she show us her scars? Doubtful.
- 15) We get two pictures of Lucas, but they don't match:

Those are the first two images that come up on a search, both tagged a Lucas. That isn't the same woman. The second girl has a much higher forehead and folds under her eyes.

- 16) One of the victims is named Bebe King. Nuff said.
- 17) Lucas' emergency call was at 11:47. The last victim was discharged from the hospital on August 8. Or 8/8.
- 18) Merseyside Police imposed an Emergency Restriction of Flying to stop aircraft – including helicopters and drones – from flying without permission. I'm sorry, what? Local police don't have that authority, only MI5 would be doing something like that, and why would they? The one kid was already in custody, so what does that have to do with air traffic? Did they think this was part of some general Air Blitz on Southport from Rwanda?
- 19) Axel was an actor, having taken classes from Pauline Quirke Academy and being heavily involved in musical theatre. They just throw it in our faces, don't they? Yeah, and it gets worse. He had been featured on the BBC program Children in Need, playing Doctor Who. He was not poor or disadvantaged, and was not a recent immigrant, attending the “outstanding”

Range High School in Formby.

- 20) They have made up a fake recent history for him, but the math doesn't work, as usual, because these MI5 writers are idiots who can't add or subtract. We are told he was kicked out of Range School and sent to Acorns School for delinquents, but that was in 2019. He was 17 in 2024, so in 2019 he would have been 12. Way too young for high school, barely old enough for middle school or whatever they call it over there.

I heard about this through Matt Walsh yesterday, who is selling both events as real. Why would he do that? Can Matt not do easy research like this? I suggest Matt may need to make sure events are real before he spends an hour commenting on them.
